

'AphasiaNow' weekly support group for people with the communication disability aphasia

Our support group aims to build confidence through conversation and discussions, and offers creative activities, complimentary therapies & social sessions.

"My mother always looks forward to visiting the aphasia group where she feels the people there are the only ones who fully understand her difficulties in communicating. They encourage her to develop her speech and language skills in a variety of ways and help her to feel less isolated and self conscious. The empathy and kindness shown to her give her confidence and helps her to better communicate her needs". Pattie C.
